

Hello

My comment is for the men and women about to make a decision on the no call list. I think the addition is excellent, since when does a company have the right to use my property (phone) to sell or solicit products to me? For charity purposes the no call list should be revised so as to have an option to allow me to decide if non-profit organizations can have the privilege to call. I have the option to turn off my T.V. or Radio without it turning back on to show me advertisements. There is a big difference between my phone and my T.V. My phone actively seeks my attention; my T.V. only gets my attention when I decide to give it. By allowing these companies to call me whenever they wish this is intruding on my privacy.

Thank you
Daniel Mies
